French child freed

in Somalia; second dies from wounds
MOGADISHU, Somalia, Feb. 7, (R). — A seven-year-old French schoolboy who had been kidnaped by Red Sea guerrillas was freed here today in a ceremony that defused some of the tension between France and Somalia in the Horn of Africa.

Frank Rutkowski, whose detention prompted France to send warships and major troop reinforcements into the area, was handed over to the French Ambassador by Somali Foreign Secretary Omar Arteh Ghaleb in the presence of the entire diplomatic corps.

Mr. Arteh said that many other French children, who had been with Frank in a bus hijacked by Somali-based guerrillas on Tuesday, were killed by French troops. The French version is that the troops stormed the vehicle and freed 28 youngsters.

Frank, son of an airman at the French air base in Djibouti, capital of France's last colony in Africa, was said to be in good health.

Meanwhile, a 6-year-old French child wounded in this week's clash on the Djibouti-Somalia frontier died in Paris today in a hospital, a French Defence Ministry spokesman said.

The child, Valery Gelsbuhler, was wounded when French troops stormed her schoolbus at Loyada on the frontier on Wednesday after it had been seized by guerrillas of the Somali Coast Liberation Front.

in Guatemala quake disaster
GUATEMALA CITY, Feb. 7, (Agencies). — More than 15,000 people may have died in the two earthquakes and the series of seismic shocks that have hit Guatemala since Wednesday morning, a spokesman for the National Emergency Committee said here.

The spokesman said 7,375 victims had been buried by authorities as of last night, but that many more bodies were probably still hidden under the debris of collapsed buildings.

Another rescue official said Guatemala urgently needed flame throwers to burn bodies to avoid the spread of disease. It had neither time nor equipment needed to bury them, he said.

Meanwhile it was announced that more than 60 per cent of all the buildings in Guatemala had been destroyed by the earthquakes and lesser shocks, of which more than 400 have been registered since Wednesday.

ROCCAN FORCES ENTERED TIFARTI without resistance the following night.

Meanwhile, United Nations special envoy Olof Rydbeck arrived in El Aaiun, Western Sahara, from Madrid to prepare a report on the Sahara crisis, the Spanish national news agency Cifra reported.

He was greeted at the airport by a crowd of about 2,000 Moroccans chanting "long live (King) Hassan" and "Moroccan Sahara," Cifra said.

One group in the crowd lifted a banner of the Polisario Front the agency reported.

Mr. Rydbeck, Sweden's Ambassador to the U.N., told reporters on arrival that he was willing to talk with all parties wanting to present their views on the crisis to him, including the Front.

The occupation was in sharp contrast with the bitter fight Moroccan troops had with Algerian and Polisario units before Rabat took over Amgala in the same area a week earlier, and observers said General Mubarak had apparently persuaded the Algerians not to provoke further incidents.

Gen. Mubarak ended a week of shuttle diplomacy between Morocco and Algeria on Tuesday, and according to last night's announcement here Moroccan forces entered Tifariti without resistance the following night.

Syria pledges to uphold Lebanese-PLO agreements

BEIRUT, Feb. 7, (Agencies). — Lebanese President Suleiman Franjleh returned from a brief visit to Damascus today with a Syrian pledge that the 400,000 Palestinians in Lebanon will obey agreements regulating their activities here.

Mr. Franjleh's one-day visit to the Syrian capital, and his talks with Syrian President Hafez Al-Assad, were seen here as a crucial step towards cementing the still-precarious ceasefire in Lebanon.

Syria formally guaranteed a 1969 agreement regulating relations between Lebanon and the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO).

The issue of Lebanese-Palestinian relations had been considered crucial to any lasting Lebanese settlement.

The Syrian guarantee was announced in a joint communique after several hours of talks between the Syrian and Lebanese presidents.

General Assad stressed the need, not for the elaboration of a written undertaking, but for cooperation between Syrians, Lebanese and Palestinians "to safeguard their common interests."

According to the joint communique, today's talks on the "bloody events" in Lebanon covered implications at inter-Arab level, "particularly at the level of states in confrontation with Israel."

Gen. Assad said he had found in Mr. Franjleh — whom he met today for the first time since the Lebanese civil war began last April — "all the understanding necessary to bring Lebanon out of the crisis."

Gen. Assad added that he might also visit Lebanon, saying "Lebanon is our country and there are no barriers between Lebanon and Syria."

Tight security arrangements were taken for Mr. Franjleh's half-hour flights from and to Beirut, but there were no incidents. He was accompanied by Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami, who attended part of today's talks with Syria Prime Minister Mahmoud Ayoubi.

In Beirut tonight, Mr. Karami said the talks were the culmination of successful Syrian efforts to reconcile the Lebanese parties and find a common denominator.

A much awaited reform package, which gives the Moslem community a greater role in the power sharing formula by which Lebanon is governed, is expected to be announced shortly.

2,000 protest in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM, Feb. 7 (AFP). — About 2,000 high school students demonstrated peacefully here today against an Israeli court ruling that authorities cannot stop Jews from praying round the Al Aqsa Mosque, the third most-revered holy place in Islam.

Large numbers of Israeli police watched the demonstrators, near the mosque, but did not intervene.

The students, who sang pro-Palestinian songs, were from the Arab sector in occupied East Jerusalem, and the occupied West Bank.

In surprise move

China's security chief named acting premier

PEKING, Feb. 7 (R). — China tonight announced that Public Security minister Hua Guofeng had been appointed acting premier following the death of Chou En-lai last month.

The appointment, which came as a major surprise, was confirmed in an official New China News Agency (NCNA) report.

NCNA referred to Mr. Hua as acting Premier for the first time in an account of a meeting he had today with Venezuela's ambassador.

It was not clear if Mr. Hua had been appointed to a temporary post or whether his name would be passed on to the National People's Congress — the parliament — for ratification as full premier.

The man almost universally tipped to succeed Chou En-lai was Mr. Teng Hsiao-ping, the most senior of the 12 vice-premiers, who had fulfilled major state functions since Chou fell ill.

Press says Prince Bernhard received Lockheed payments

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7, (AFP). — The Dutch "high official" who has received more than one million dollars from the Lockheed Aircraft Company was identified today by two American newspapers as Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands.

The newspapers were the Washington Post and the New York Times.

The Post reported that the Lockheed files showed the payment of one million dollars to Prince Bernhard in 1961-62, with another 100,000 dollars in 1972.

One of Lockheed's top executives, A. C. Kotchian, told a Senate committee yesterday that his company had paid out some $15 million to civil servants, politicians, political parties and business executives in a number of countries because Lockheed felt this was the best way of selling planes.

Mr. Schmidt said they had had "a friendly meeting" in a long series of friendly meetings. Mr. Wilson affirmed that the tradition of two meetings yearly by the British and West German heads of governments was now firmly established.

Rival Angolan movements report successes in war

LUANDA, Feb. 7, (Agencies). — MPLA troops today captured the port of San Antonio do Zaire, close to Angola's northern border with Zaire, the People's Liberation Movement announced here.

An MPLA communique said the formerly FNLA (National Liberation Front) town fell this morning and a number of prisoners had been taken, "including one of North American nationality."

The communique said the MPLA had also taken control of two areas between Ambrizete and San Antonio on Angola's northern coast.

On the southern front the MPLA said that with the capture of Alto Hama they were now only a few dozen kilometres away from Huambo (formerly Nova Lisboa), headquarters of UNITA (Union for Total Independence).

Alto Hama straddles an important crossroads leading to both Huambo and Silva Porto.

The MPLA also said it was pushing ahead along the Benguelan Railway line — until the war the vital route for Zaire and Zairese copper exports to Angola's ports — towards Luso in the east and had taken possession of Lumege, a town only 60 kms away.

Earlier, it was announced in Kinshasa that the pro-Western UNITA liberation movement today reported big successes for its counter-offensive against the Soviet-backed MPLA push in Angola.

How to postpone peace

When Israeli Prime Minister Rabin started his visit to the United States two weeks ago, he went around telling everybody that Israel could only negotiate with the Arabs from a position of strength. He emphasised to the U.S. Congress and people that Israel is willing to make peace with the Arabs, but it needs to maintain a strong military posture throughout any peace negotiations.

Now that his visit is over, he is back in Israel telling everybody there that his visit to the U.S. has resulted in promises of enough weapons to ensure a real "strengthening" of Israel's armed forces.

So one asks Mr. Rabin and his arms suppliers: if the Israeli military posture is now guaranteed by the United States, what can we expect from the promises about entering peace negotiations from a position of strength? The Israelis have their strength, but will they now step forward and keep their part of the deal — to talk peace?

No such thing will happen, and Mr. Rabin never had any intention of moving forward with peace talks with the Arab states. But it serves Israeli purposes to tell the American people that a strong Israel will move quickly towards making peace with the Arabs, because this is the kind of vapid talk that sounds good on American television. It is, however, hollow talk, and yet another in the recent string of Israeli pronouncements whose converging purpose has been to put off peace, and not to bring it closer.

We have stated before and we state again that Israeli talk about peace negotiations is idle chatter in the wind, because the Israelis do not have the fundamental national depth or the prerequisite national goals that would allow them to enter peace negotiations with any clear idea of what they seek from those negotiations. Their purpose is simply to stall, sidetrack and sabotage any force that prods them to come to grips with who they are and what they want. Until they decide whether they want to be an indigenous state in the Middle East or an island outpost of western interests, they will go around talking about peace without really understanding what peace means.

So what about Mr. Rabin's promises? He has his arms commitments from the United States, coupled with the diplomatic support in international forums that is the ancillary factor in the strategy of stalemate.

There is not much to expect, and less to tell Mr. Rabin himself. But those people who so regularly fall for the Israeli line about negotiating from strength may find it opportune to ask the Israeli leadership when these movements towards peace are going to move anywhere more substantial than reinforcing a garrison state whose national purpose seems to be one big military build-up.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

The Lebanese people ought to understand by now that the manner in which the Syrian initiative has consistently been carried out is the only logical one in view of the requirements of Lebanese security and welfare. No other alternative should replace it, Al-Ra'i said on Saturday.

The Syrian Lebanese summit comes at a time when many foreign powers tried in vain to topple the Syrian sponsored cease fire the paper said. The Lebanese crisis enters a new stage today, with the ceasefire taking hold between the warring factions. A new formula for coexistence between themselves and the Palestinians should come into effect.

The paper added that the Syrian and Lebanese Presidents meet today in Damascus with a mandate from both factions, Christians and Moslem alike with the blessings of the Palestinians. It should be understood that the summit is an apex of painful negotiations between all the warring factions, and all parties concerned have to abide by the outcome of this summit, the paper concluded.

Ad Dustour said that the Zionists deceived many Soviet Jews into migrating to Israel but it did not take long for the deception to be unmasked.

No doubt Soviet Jews were discriminated against by their fellow Jews within the great "Promised Homeland" as it came out at yesterday's news conference in Moscow, the paper said.

The paper expressed the hope that such defects in Israeli society will be publicised by the Arabs so as to expose the real Zionist intentions and discriminatory acts even against their coreligionists.

The paper also added that the Arabs have to be cautious in their campaign against Zionism and not overestimate the exodus of Soviet Jews from Israel.

After hearing Rifai statement Swiss delegation is received in royal audience

Their Majesties King Hussein and Queen Alia received in audience at the Royal Hashemite Court Saturday the Swiss parliamentary delegation currently on a visit to Jordan as part of a fact-finding mission to several Arab countries.

The nine-member delegation earlier met with Prime Minister Zeid Rifai, who stressed that no possible peace could be achieved in the area unless Israel withdraws from all occupied Arab territories and restores the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people.

He reiterated Jordan's commitment to the 1974 Rabat summit resolutions which he said had projected the political and national dimension of the Palestinian personality.

The Prime Minister referred to the resolution on the Palestinian question submitted by the non-aligned countries to the U.N. Security Council and said this was evidence of the world's conviction that the Palestinian people have political and national rights, which include the right to return to their homeland and enjoy legitimate national rights.

Jordan, the Prime Minister said, will support with all its potential Palestinian rights until peace is achieved and the land is returned to its legal owners.

He then reviewed Jordan's plans for the future, especially the five year development plan, as well as Jordanian-Swiss relations.

Housing groups approve plans for federation

AMMAN. — The Housing Bank and the Housing Corporation have approved the Jordanian Cooperatives Society's recommendation to establish a federation of all housing societies. Such a federation would constitute a powerful economic unit which could negotiate and implement several housing projects simultaneously, and at lower cost.

The directors of the Housing Corporation, Housing Bank and the Jordanian Cooperatives Society met Saturday at the co-operatives training centre and discussed means to coordinate between the various institutions concerned to bring to life the proposed federation.

Also present at the meetings were representatives of all the housing societies in the kingdom.

Awqaf minister reviews 1975 activities

AMMAN. — The Ministry of Awqaf and Islamic Affairs, entrusted with religious endowments and custody of the holy places, has been active in pan-Arab gatherings and in philanthropic activities at home during 1975 the Minister, Dr. Abdul Aziz Khayyat, said in a press interview Friday.

Reviewing the achievements of the past year, Dr. Khayyat said that the ministry had participated in the activities of the Preparatory Committee of the Islamic Foreign Ministers Conference held in Jeddah in March, the two Islamic broadcasting stations' conferences, in Riyadh and Jeddah, the Islamic conference in Bombay and the Sixth Islamic Ministerial Conference on Jerusalem, which met in Jeddah.

Dr. Khayyat said the ministry had expanded maintenance services to several Islamic historical places and mosques throughout the kingdom. The Ministry is also stepping up its vocational training programme and providing academic scholarships to help satisfy the country's need for skilled labour.

Sixty four young women were graduated as seamstresses from the various training centres of the ministry, he said, and several employees were sent to Arab countries to pursue higher studies.

In 1975 the Amman Shari'a (religious law) Institute graduated 36 students, as against 30 in 1974.

We are trying, he added, to develop the revenues of Awqaf Alia.

Mauritanians say farewell

A Mauritanian delegation left here Saturday after a five-day visit during which it delivered a message to King Hussein from President Moktar Ould Daddah. A delegation spokesman said the team held discussions with Jordanian leaders on closer cooperation in various fields, particularly in the cultural and health domains.

The messages warn of Israeli designs to alter the character of the Holy City.

The messages also stress the need for urgent repairs in the Aqsa Mosque, including Saladin's Pulpit which the King has ordered repaired at Jordan's expense.

Saladin's Pulpit was burnt in the 1969 fire which partially destroyed the mosque.

In his messages, King Hussein appeals to Arab and Muslim countries for concerted action to preserve the historic features of Jerusalem and the Aqsa Mosque.

Syrian official promises hotter villa war if Rhodesian break down

AMMAN, Feb. 7 (AFP). — Asked if he could influence the course of the war, Mr. Nkomo said: "Influence or not influence, the people of this country have had it made impossible for them to achieve what anybody else has and it is inevitable that people will take things into their own hands. It's a simple fact."

The time had come when major decisions had to be taken in the constitutional talks, Mr. Nkomo said.

Both sides would meet again on Tuesday after an adjournment about two weeks.

Congress of Europe rejects "two-tier" EEC system

BRUSSELS, Feb. 7 (AFP). — The Congress of Europe today wound up a three-day meeting devoted to a study of the report by Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans on the future of the Common Market by rejecting his proposal for a two-tier economic system.

The Tindemans report, which was distributed to EEC heads of government at the end of December, said the six strong economies of West Germany, France, Denmark and the Benelux Nations should go ahead with economic and monetary union even without the full participation of the weak economies of Britain, Ireland and Italy.

British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan had said recently that a two-tier system could lead to the break-up of the EEC.

Group of 77 conference ends in Manila with economic action programme

MANILA, Feb. 7, (AFP). — While a precarious arrangement was arrived at on the landlocked question in overnight and afternoon marathon sessions that extended the conference for one day, the stalemate remained on what products would initially be backed up by a projected $ 3 billion fund.

The fund would set up buffer stocks and regulate world prices. Agreement on the final list out of the indicative list of 18 products submitted and approved, would have been the dramatic spearhead of the commodities programme of the Manila conference.

The commodities on the list were banana, bauxite, wood, cacao, coffee, rubber, cotton, copper, tin, iron ore, hard fibers, vegetable oils, jute, manganese, phosphate, sugar, tea and meat.

Only about four or five commodities, according to UNCTAD Secretary General Gamani Corea of Sri Lanka, could initially be backed up by the common fund. National and regional differences within and among the Asian, Latin American and African blocks hindered agreement on the final list.

On the question of landlocked countries, the conference reaffirmed their right of access to and from the sea but this was hedged about by reservations of several countries with-

NATO fears that Soviet navy could isolate Europe

BRUSSELS, Feb. 7 (R). — The rapidly-growing Soviet navy is aiming for the ability to cut off Europe from the United States and oil-producing countries, one of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's (NATO) military heads said today.

"And this is taking place at a time when, in NATO, the trend is for some countries to reduce their maritime commitments to NATO," said Sir Peter Hill-norton, British Admiral of the Fleet and Chairman of the alliance's Military Committee.

Writing in the latest edition of the NATO magazine, the Admiral said the Soviet fleet had made such advances during the past 16 years that it now was a world naval power.

"In my view these developments indicate the importance which the Soviets attach to cutting the lifeline between North America and Europe, and Europe and the oil-producing areas," he said.

He said the Soviet navy now maintained about 60 warships in the Mediterranean and 20 in the Indian Ocean.

It's the most popular drink in the bamboo-line bar of Hanoi's new Thang Loi (Victory)-hotel.

To the foreign visitor, the North Vietnamese capital, recovering from the longest war in modern history, is an even stranger mixture—a cocktail of bold and new, with a dash of private enterprise.

The modernistic open-plan hotel, built last summer by the Cubans, stands among fishing villages and crumbling Buddhist temples on the Banks of Hanoi's big Ho Tay lake, is the pride of the new government.

Most of the guests, like the cognac served in the Bars are Russian. At dinner they share the almost empty restaurant with a handful of other east Europeans, and Swedish officials.

Hanoi's biggest surprise is the absence of bomb damage.

Foreigners resident during the American air raids report that very few bombs hit the city proper. They say accurate pinpoint attacks destroyed virtually all bridges, roads and byways into the capital.

Hanoi did suffer some casualties. Visitors are shown a little monument in re-built Kham Thien street near the city railway station. It was there have been killed by bombs from B-52's on Christmas eve, 1972.

The wreckage of U.S. bombers is displayed in various parks around Hanoi. Hotel souvenir shops sell alloy combs made from the remains of B-52s. On them is engraved a Ho Chi Minh quotation: "Nothing is more precious than independence and freedom."

EEC introduces taxes to offset lira devaluations

BRUSSELS, Feb. 6, (AFP). — A border tax of 6.2 per cent will be introduced for trade in agricultural products between Italy and its partners in the European Economic Community as from Monday, the EEC commission announced today.

The border tax—known as "compensatory amount" in EEC jargon—will serve to offset, at least in part, the recent depreciation of the floating lira against other EEC currencies.

The lira has declined by some ten to 12 per cent against leading foreign currencies in general since the Italian cabinet crisis began a month ago. Against EEC currencies it has lost 7.5 per cent on average in the past two weeks.

This had made Italian farm products cheaper for importers in other EEC countries.

Inversely, it has reduced the buying power of Italian importers.

Italian wine has become still cheaper on the French market, adding to the difficulties of French wine producers.

France and Italy have been involved in a dispute since last September because the French government took steps to curb a rising tide of Italian wine imported at prices French producers are unable to compete with.

EEC officials specifically said the border tax would apply to wine exported by Italy.

The system will also bring relief to Bavarian cheese makers and West German and French meat producers. Italian importers in the past several days found their prices too high to make any business, because of the declining value of the lira.

The introduction of the border tax is likely to restore order in the flow of farm products between Italy and its partners in all sectors except wine. Such products as grain or milk are covered by market regulations under which the EEC buys up possible surpluses at prices which are agreed on the basis of the relationship between the lira and other EEC currencies. But there is no support buying of wine.

The Franco-Italian row can therefore only be settled through a revision of EEC regulations for wine, which France has requested.

Kissinger calls for support of nuclear power sales

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6, (R). — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said today U.S. sales of nuclear reactors overseas could amount to $140 billion over the next 25 years.

Dr Kissinger made the prediction as he urged congress to move rapidly in authorising legislation which would set the stage for a rapid expansion of U.S. nuclear fuel supplies.

Without additional uranium enrichment facilities, reactor sales could be restricted, he said.

To date, the United States had sold about $2 billion worth of reactors and related goods and services to customers abroad.

Testifying before congress's joint atomic energy committee, the Secretary said both Iran and Japan had expressed interest in investing in a consortium of enriched uranium supply facilities which had been proposed as a means of meeting future nuclear energy needs.

The 285-meter-long craft will carry the fuel in five huge 36-meter-diameter aluminum tanks (below). Eight are to be built.

Hot rock: the new power source for Britain?

A new and substantial energy resource for Britain may exist in the form of "hot rocks" and warm water deep under the soil.

The Government's Department of Energy estimates that hot rocks deep under the county of Cornwall, in the south-west corner of Britain, may constitute an energy resource equal to eight thousand million tons of coal.

Geothermal energy cannot be directly substituted for oil or coal, but the sheer quantity of energy which might come from the hot rocks is very impressive: in Cornwall alone there may be the equivalent of over twenty years' supply of energy for the entire United Kingdom at the present rate of consumption.

And there may be more in other parts of Britain. The Energy Technology Support Unit at Harwell, who did the research, say that the Durham area in north-east England also looks promising from the geological point of view. And beneath the Hampshire basin in southern England there could be natural warm water ideal for heating homes and places of work.

These details come from a Department of Energy report, but it is by no means the last word on geothermal energy for Britain. The report calls for a new research programme which could cost the Government several hundred thousand pounds a year.

Countries which already make extensive use of geothermal energy, such as Iceland, Italy and New Zealand, generally have spectacular sources of natural steam and hot water close to the surface. Britain has no geysers and relatively few hot springs, and here it may be necessary to drill several kilometres down into hard rocks in order to find temperatures in the useful range between 100° and 300° C.

Technology is another area where research is still needed. The oil industry has developed methods of deep drilling, and they've discovered how to split the rocks far below the surface by pumping water down the well at high pressure.

But only very recently have American scientists shown that the same technique can be used to split the harder rocks from which we might want to extract heat. The idea is that cold water could be pumped down one well into the rocks, and hot water or steam would return up a second well. But no one has yet demonstrated that artificially splitting rocks is an effective means of extracting their heat.

The research group recognise that geothermal energy has its problems. An efficient power station needs to run at a high temperature—hotter than most of the rocks we can reach with present-day drilling methods.

So the Harwell group does not see geothermal and other non-fossil-fuel sources of energy coming into their own until some time around the turn of the century.

Balkan conference ends on cooperative note

ATHENS, Feb. 6 (AFP). — The first five-nation inter-Balkan governmental conference since World War II closed here Friday with agreement over areas open to possible cooperation but no immediate concrete results.

After 11 days of talks, representatives of Bulgaria, Greece, Romania, Turkey and Yugoslavia agreed that multilateral cooperation was possible in the fields of agriculture, commerce, energy, transportation, telecommunications and the environment, a final communique said.

ILO reports world-wide increases in unemployment for 1975

GENEVA, Feb. 6, — Unemployment rose sharply in 1975 in many countries throughout the West and the Third World, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) reported today.

It also said that more redundancies did not quench inflation and that longer working hours did not raise productivity—findings that challenge established economic theories.

A study on unemployment found that "striking increase... were the outstanding feature of 1975" in three quarters of those nations which supplied figures.

The number of jobless doubled in New Zealand, Switzerland, and Luxembourg, increased by more than half in Belgium, Chile, Portugal, Spain and Britain, and by up to 50 per cent in Australia, Austria, France, Denmark, Japan, Norway, Puerto Rico, South Africa and Zambia.

In Britain, it crossed the 1 million mark in July last year for the first time since 1940 and Germany had more than a million unemployed for the first time.

Coal declines as European power source

GENEVA, Feb. 6, (R). — West Europe will continue using less coal for its energy needs over the next 10 years, but the decline will be slower than previously imagined, United Nations economists said here today.

A survey by the Secretariat of the U.N. Economic Commission for Europe (EEC) said that before the oil crisis of 1973-74 forecasters anticipated that the use of coal would be halved by 1985.

By that time, it was thought, coal would account for only 11 to 13 per cent of West Europe's energy needs, compared with 26 per cent in 1974. But this view had now been revised.

"Present thinking is that the share of coal in the total supply of energy will continue to shrink—but slowly—up to 1985, to about 21 per cent," the survey revealed.

time in 20 years.

Unemployment rose ably but by less than cent in the United States, Canada, Germany, Greece and Yugoslavia.

Migrant workers in industrialised countries and young people under 25 were among the worst hit.

The ILO findings about effect—or lack of it—on economies in stopping out economy management in United States and Britain 1965 to 1975.

In Japan for every cent cut in working hours the 1960's productivity 2.5 per cent.

Facsimile machine enters the home

OSAKA, JAPAN, Feb. 6 (AP). — A prototype of economical telephoned facsimile equipment use has been unveiled by Matsushita Graphic Communication Systems, Inc., top facsimile equipment.

The device, only the size of a small cassette tape, uses postcard-size paper to complete transmission in minutes, a Matsushita man said.

He said his company is developing the equipment with the hope that annual production of the equipment will reach 2,000,000 units.

Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Public Corp. is expected to put the facsimile equipment in operation in 1978, he said.

ECONOMIC BRIEFS

● OPORTO, Portugal. — Port wine exports plummeted more than 13 per cent in volume last year following an adulteration scandal and the industry's first strike since 1919, according to official figures. But the value rose by more than 11 per cent compared with 1974.

● TAIPEI. — Taiwan will send a 70-member technical mission to Saudi Arabia next month to study ways of easing congestion at the nation's three international seaports, it was learned here today. The mission would consist of experts in cargo handlings, port management and port facilities.

● TUMBA, Sweden. — Alfa Romeo, the big Swedish agricultural and dairy equipment manufacturer, today announced a 31 million sterling order from Iran for 10 dairies. These are hoped to be in operation by 1977.

● CASABLANCA. — Morocco has decided to import 300 Dutch dairy cows by air instead of by sea because they suffer less air-sickness than sea-sickness. This should ensure that they arrive in good condition.

● TOKYO. — Brazil welcomes Japan's participation in its development of oil fields, visiting Brazilian Mines and Energy Minister Shigeaki Ueki said today.

76 textiles : simplicity in design for the home

Unemployment is the theme of home textiles for 1976. Smaller designs of florals or checks, often on a white or light background, and easy-care fabrics up to simplicity in design.

The theme for 1976 is simplicity. For example, a floral design on a background of a floral overprint but the overall effect is a simple, clean, and modern version of the floral motif.

Measures of many varied talents, no dominant colour was chosen. The experts say that the colour of the year is a mix of the earthy and the sophisticated. French blue, and greys, and, surprisingly, a colour which has been in vogue for quite a while.

New Fibre Blend

Since the advent of polyester/cotton for bedwear, easy-care has become an accepted part of fashion household textiles, so it is of interest to find an entirely new fibre blend. Polyester/Vincel is considered by its manufacturers to give the crisp, silky handle which people expect from cotton sheets, with the additional advantage of retaining that crispness all the while it is in use.

The range in this new blend is called the Cloudsoft collection and comes, from Christy. There are three sheet and three duvet cover designs, all with matching pillowcases. The patterns tend to be small and delicate, and include Antoinette, tiny flower sprays on a white ground; Tivoli, an overall check for a sheet design, with Camille taking the check base and adding a floral overprint for a duvet cover.

The furnishing fabric story continues the theme of simple, small-scale design, but with a more detailed approach, and a strong secondary feeling for traditional designs and fabrics.

The Bonus

Triobal fabrics are everywhere, and the most popular design theme is endless variations on the Regency stripe. An important aspect of the traditional market is the increasing evidence of easy-care fabrics; blends of Lirille/Courteille, Crim-

Prints always in fashion, include small-scale floral themes — many designs looking as though they have come straight

Fashion Revival

A fashion revival for linen union coincides with greater use of loose-covers and this has prompted many companies to re-introduce or update their ranges. Patterns still tend to be traditional, but one company offered a Vincel/flax blend for easy-care.

Furnishing fabrics as a whole do not come as collections, but an exception is the new Triad range. This range of complementary wallpapers and fabrics is updated every two years. The idea is to provide something to appeal to every taste, whether the home is a small semi-detached house or the grandest country mansion. Patterns are mainly floral, in bold, dramatic or simple, romantic styles. To mix and match there is a range of plain dyed linen union in 18 colours and 46 plain cotton reps.

Plain companion wallpapers include textures of simulated line, slubs, fine silks and be-sian. Colours range from reds, jades and yellows to cool greys and naturals. To complete a look, roller blinds, throw-over bedspreads and quilts can be made to order.

Ford launches '76 campaign with appeal to moderate policies

CONCORD, NEW HAMPSHIRE, Feb. 7. (R). — President Ford today officially opened his campaign by appealing to New Hampshire Republicans to support middle-of-the-road policies aimed at restoring prosperity after the 1975 recession.

Buoyed by a sharp drop in unemployment, Mr Ford flew here for his first direct test of strength with former California Governor Ronald Reagan, his challenger for the Republican presidential nomination.

Speaking to the Nashua Chamber of Commerce tonight, the President said his cautious anti-recession policies had paid off and the country was now well on the road to recovery.

"I knew that measures taken in panic would be counterproductive," he said.

"1975 was a year of hard decisions and difficult compromises. But it was also a year of a new realism...."

Presidential candidates are out in force this weekend in New Hampshire because no candidate has been elected president who did not win the primary here—first test of America's voters—since it was instituted in 1952.

Madrid moves ahead with legal reforms

MADRID, Feb. 7. (R). — Spain's new government has bowed to opposition demands and repealed an anti-terrorist law under which killers of soldiers or policemen were automatically sentenced to death.

Under the law, four urban guerrillas were summarily tried by court martial and executed by firing squads last September in the face of world-wide outrage that brought Spain's temporary diplomatic isolation.

The government also drafted a bill easing outright bans on political meetings and demonstrations. It promised in addition to abolish the special public order courts that try offences such as the membership of outlawed political parties.

Announcing the measures after a cabinet meeting last night, Justice Minister Antonio Garrigues said they underlined the government's commitment to reforms.

But provisions giving police wide powers of search, and allowing them to detain suspects for up to ten days before being brought to court, were left intact.

Opposition parties in Barcelona went ahead, meanwhile, with preparations for a banned political demonstration scheduled for tomorrow.

President Franjeh expressed his thanks for the Syrian peace initiative, he said.

U.K. football roundup

Liverpool tops Leeds United 2-0

LONDON, Feb. 7. (AFP). — Liverpool continued today to show their supremacy over the other giant of the English Football League Leeds United, when they drew at Coventry through an equaliser in the 77th minute.

The supporters in the best Coventry gate this season, 33,821, were already anticipating the goal by substitute Les Cartwright as sufficient for victory when Scotland's Lou Macari levelled the scores and so helped United stretch their unbeaten league run to nine games.

Queen's Park Rangers are back in the championship reckoning, in third place, three points behind the leading club, after beating Wolverhampton 4-1 Shepherd's Bush.

There was also a change at the top of the Second Division. In gaining their first win of 1976, Fulham scored two goals without reply against Sunderland, who dropped from first to third.

Bolton, winners at Portsmouth went to the top, followed by Bristol City who shared two goals with Southampton watched by 23,316, easily the best gate outside Division One.

There is no change at the top of Scotland's premier league. Celtic and Rangers who were both at home, beat Hearts and Aberdeen respectively, so the "Celts" retain their one-point lead over their great rivals.

Hearts could not contain Scotland's Kency Dalgleish, who scored two fine second-half goals to give Celtic victory.

In the big "trailer" for the fourth-round Scottish Cup meeting between the same teams next Saturday, Rangers beat Aberdeen 2-1.
